HOLOCAUST VICTIM ASSETS LITIGATION

CORRECTED
FIRST SUPPLEMENTAL OBJECTIONS OF CLASS MEMBERS TO REQUEST BY LEAD SETTLEMENT COUNSEL FOR ATTORNEYS FEES

Objectors-class members David Schaecter, Leo Rechter, David Mermelstein, Alex Moskovic, Esther Widman, Fred Taucher, Jack Rubin, Henry Schuster, Anita Schuster, Herbert Karliner, Lea Weems, Israel Arbeiter, Sam Gasson, "G.K.," "L.K.," "F.K.," "D.B.," and "J.R" (henceforth referred to as "Objectors" or "US Survivor class members"), through undersigned counsel, pursuant to Federal Rules of Civil Procedure 23, 54, and Local Rule 23.1, file the following supplemental objections to the fee request submitted by "Lead Plaintiffs' Settlement Counsel" Burt Neuborne.[1] The U.S. Survivors, note in connection with this filing, that Mr. Neuborne has already received $4.5 million from the German Slave Labor/Foundation litigation, an amount reported to be double his "lodestar," for work which overlapped significantly with the period of time covered by this fee request. The U.S. Survivors object to his requested compensation not only for the reasons set forth below, but because his $4.1 million request, which exceeds the $3,000,850 received by all U.S. Survivors in the Looted Assets class to date, punctuates the frustration and inequity experienced by Looted Assets class members in the U.S. throughout this case. Mr. Neuborne's request should be denied by this Court.

[1] Objectors restate and incorporate their reservations of rights and specific objections included in their January 13, and 19, 2006 filings.

Mr. Neuborne's filings contain a number of personal attacks on the U.S. Survivor Objectors' counsel. These comments are obviously designed to divert the Court's attention from the facts which bear on his entitlement to attorneys' fees in any amount, let alone at the unprecedented hourly rate which he seeks. It bears repeating that these objections are filed on behalf of Holocaust Survivors, class members who have every right to oppose the fee request. Moreover, nothing allegedly done by counsel representing U.S. Survivors of the Holocaust in the Looted Assets class has any bearing on three facts which Mr. Neuborne cannot dispute. First, he is seeking fees from the pool of funds available to the class he publicly, in court filings and elsewhere, purported for over 8 years to represent on a "pro bono" basis. Second, his time records reflect a claim for time that he has publicly, in court filings and elsewhere, declared is non-compensable. Third, he has filed a claim for time performed that his time records, on their face, establish that some of the work he allegedly performed was not contemporaneously recorded, and that some of the work he allegedly performed was in fact not performed for the class he purported to represent. These points are addressed in greater detail below.

The U.S. Survivors Objectors note that the Court has not at this time addressed the requirement of FRCP 23(h)(1) for the class to receive notice "in a reasonable manner" of Mr. Neuborne's fee request, nor set a schedule for class members to file adversary submissions under FRCP 54(d). Objectors submit that after notice to the public of the work claimed asserted by Mr. Neuborne, other class members might well have comments on some of his claims as well. However, having received Mr. Neuborne's initial filing and supplemental filings through February 12, 2006, Objectors are filing this supplemental response.[2]

A. Notice of Mr. Neuborne's Fee Request Must be Directed to the Class in a Reasonable Manner Under Rule 23(h).

Mr. Neuborne opposes the application of Rule 23(h)(1) so as to require reasonable notice to the class of his fee request. Letter from Samuel Issacharoff to the Honorable Edward R. Korman, February 10, 2006. However, under the rules, notice of class counsel's fee request must be "directed to class members in a reasonable manner." The Court does not have the discretion to ignore the rule as Mr. Neuborne suggests. Rule 23(h) provides:

> (1) Motion for Award of Attorneys Fees. A claim for an award of attorneys fees and nontaxable costs must be made by motion under Rule 54(d)(2), subject to the provisions of this subdivision, at a time set by the court. Notice of the motion must be served on all parties, and for motions by class counsel, directed to class members in a reasonable manner.

[2] The Neuborne Supplemental Memorandum of Law in Support of Fee Application of Burt Neuborne dated February 2, 2006 ("Supplemental Neuborne Memorandum") states that "[n]either set of objections contests the accuracy of the enumeration and description in Mr Neuborne's initial declaration of his time entries." Of course, Objectors' filing was made prior to receipt of those time entries and, as shown below and reflected in counsel's February 1, 2006 letter to Mr. Issacharoff, there are a number of questions raised by Mr. Neuborne's time entries.

Objectors also contest numerous statements in the Supplemental Neuborne Memorandum purporting to characterize Objectors' positions, which are stated in their filings, and speak for themselves.

(Emphasis supplied).[3] Subdivision (h) was added in 2003. It is mandatory.

The Class members have the right to rely on the duly enacted Rules of Civil Procedure, without regard to Mr. Neuborne's preferred construction. As the Supreme Court held in Amchem Products, Inc., v. Windsor, 521 U.S. 591 (1997):

> [C]ourts must be mindful that the Rule as now composed sets the requirements they are bound to enforce. Federal Rules take effect after an extensive deliberative process involving many reviewers: a Rules Advisory Committee, public commenters, the judicial Conference, this Court, the Congress. See 28 U.S. C. Section 2073, 2074. The text of the rule thus proposed and reviewed limits judicial inventiveness. Courts are not free to amend a rule outside the process Congress ordered, a process properly tuned to the instruction that rules of procedure 'shall not abridge any substantive right." Section 2072.

Id., at 620. (Emphasis supplied).

Mr. Neuborne argues that Rule 23(h)(1) does not apply because the case was initiated prior to the adoption of the 2003 amendments, and because one notice has already been made to the class. He says he is aware of "no case that has followed" the "exceedingly formal reading of amended Rule 23" advanced by the U.S. Survivors and by the Class.[4] However, there are in fact a number of recent decisions applying Rule 23(h)(1) to class counsel fee requests in cases filed before its effective date. These cases were catalogued in Cobell v. Norton, 2005 WL 3466712 (D.D.C. Dec. 19, 2005)(no internal page citations available). In Cobell, the Court held, in a case filed in 1996, tried to judgment in 1999 and affirmed on appeal in 2001, that class counsel's motion for attorneys fees was subject to Rule 23(h)(1) and was required to be directed to the class in a reasonable manner.

Like Mr. Neuborne, Plaintiffs' counsel in Cobell opposed giving notice to the class of their fee request, arguing "the notice requirements of Rule 23(h)(1) do not apply to the Interim Fee Petition because the rule only became effective on December 1, 2003, – long after the initiation of this litigation. . . ." Id. The Court rejected that argument:

> Plaintiffs' argument is unpersuasive as it overlooks the fact that Rule 23(h), as a procedural rule, may be "applied in suits arising before their enactment without raising concerns about retroactivity." [citation omitted]. Keeping faith with this principle, courts have consistently applied Rule 23(h) to litigation initiated before its enactment. See, e.g. In re Livent, Inc., Noteholders Securities Litig., 355 F.Supp.2d 722 (S.D.N.Y. 2005)(Securities Class Action Complaint filed on Oct. 09, 1998); In re WorldCom, Inc., ERISA Litig., 2004 WL 2338151 (S.D.N.Y. Oct. 18, 2004)(ERISA class action filed on June 21, 2002); Latino Officers Ass'n City of New York, Inc. v. City of New York, 2004 WL 2066605 (S.D.N.Y. Sept. 15, 2004)(Title VI action filed in September 1999).

Similarly, the Third Circuit held the 2003 amendments to Rule 23 applied to a case filed before the effective date of the rule. In re Rite Aid Corp. Securities Litig., 396 F.3d 294 (3d Cir. 2005). Rite Aid, a securities class action, was filed in 1999, settled in 2000, appealed in 2001, renegotiated, and re-approved in May of 2003 after a notice to the class which included class counsel's request for fees of 25% of the settlement. The court cited the 2003 amendment (Rule 23(e)(4)(A)) as supporting a class member's standing to object to and appeal the fee award. It also noted the applicability of other provisions of the 2003 amendments, including provisions of Rule 23(h).

The court in Cobell examined the issue of what notice was "reasonable" under the circumstances. It held that the notice must provide "class members with sufficient information to question objectionable fee requests and to scrutinize any potential conflicts of interest that arise from certain payment scenarios." Id., quoting Cobell v Norton, 229 F.R.D. 5, 21 (D.D.C. 2005). It concluded that Rule 23(h)(1) would be satisfied by posting the fee request on the class counsel's website (which had been used throughout the litigation the primary vehicle to communicate with the trust beneficiaries), and publishing the fee petition in the three most widely read periodicals serving the Native American community.

Accordingly, the U.S. Survivors submit that Mr. Neuborne's complete fee request, including all time entries, should be posted on the Court's website, www.swissbankclaims.com, and that a notice of the posting of the entire fee application on the website should be published in the major periodicals serving the Holocaust survivor community. That notice should also include a summary of the request, including the key elements such as the total payment requested, the period of time covered, the number of hours claimed by year, the hourly rate claimed, and a general summary of the work performed. Such a notice program could be effected for a relatively reasonable amount, probably in the range of $50,000. The proposal would not only have the benefit of complying with Rule 23(h) and Rule 54, but it would accord the class members their due respect by informing them of the requested payment from the settlement fund and allowing them to voice their support or objections.

Mr. Neuborne also argues that Rule 23(h)(1) does not apply because the original settlement notice provided for a cap on attorneys fees that would exceed the sum already awarded to other class counsel, as well as the sum he currently seeks. This argument also fails, based solely on the terms of the Class Notice he relies upon. That Notice states: "The court appointed attorneys as Settlement Class Counsel, ... Certain attorneys will apply to the Court for reimbursement of their costs, up to about .2% of the Fund. Certain Plaintiffs' attorneys will also apply for fees, up to at most 1.8% of the Fund. The Court may award a lower amount. Most attorneys will not apply for fees, . . ." See Issacharoff Letter of February10, 2006 (Emphasis supplied).

The Notice on which Mr. Neuborne relies states that "most attorneys will not apply for fees." At the time of that notice, which was approved by the Court in May of 1999,[6] Mr. Neuborne had unqualifiedly proclaimed himself to be one of the attorneys who was not applying for fees. See Memorandum of Law Submitted by Burt Neuborne, June 16, 1997 (Exhibit F to Fee Petition); Declaration of Burt Neuborne, November 5, 1999 at 17-21 (Docket No. 367)("Neuborne November 1999 Declaration"). This Court echoed Mr. Neuborne's status as a "pro bono" lawyer for the class. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 270 F.Supp.2d 313, 322 (E.D.N.Y. 2002); In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 105 F.Supp.2d 139, 146 (E.D.N.Y. 2000). According to the Court and Mr. Neuborne's subsequent declarations, the other lawyers whose firms were not seeking fees were Melvyn Weiss and Michael Hausfeld. Id.

[6] Order Appointing Notice Administrators, Approving Forms of Notice and Notice Plan, Scheduling Exclusion Requests and Objection Deadlines, and Scheduling Final Fairness Hearing, May 10, 1999 (Docket No. 277).

The reading of the 1999 notice Mr. Neuborne advances would simultaneously render the notice itself to be false. The notice states that "most attorneys will not apply for fees." Yet Mr. Neuborne, one of the three lawyers in the case who did not previously apply for fees, is now seeking them. And Mr. Weiss, one of the other two lawyers whose firm did not seek fees, has now declared his intention to seek fees as well for post settlement work. Therefore, under Mr. Neuborne's theory, the very notice that apprised the class that "most lawyers would not seek fees" can now be interpreted by the Court to mean that all but one of the lawyers in the case will seek fees.

Mr. Neuborne also argues that the notice established a "cap" on the total amount of fees which in effect obviates the need for a new notice because his requested fees would not exceed the "cap." Yet, the same notice also says, in conjunction with the statement that most lawyers are not going to seek fees, that "[t]he Court may award a lower amount." Clearly, the cap on fees stated in the old notice does not create a legal entitlement on Mr. Neuborne's part to recover fees without a notice to the class of his request as required by Rule 23(h)(1). Mr. Neuborne cannot simply read out inconvenient provisions of the prior notice and rely on those that might give credence to his current opposition to following the rule.

Finally, the authorities cited by Mr. Neuborne's counsel do not support the argument that Rule 23(h)(1) is inapplicable to the current fee request. They are cases relating to the notices required by the Private Securities Litigation Reform Act of 1995

("PSLRA") when plaintiffs who sought to be named lead plaintiffs in accordance with the provisions of the statute, changed their application for that appointment. The statute is silent on the point. The cases cited have no applicability to the question before this Court, which involves the plain application of the clear terms of Rule 23(h) to Mr. Neuborne's fee request.

B. General Objections – Judicial Estoppel

As Objectors argued in their initial filing, Mr. Neuborne is barred from recovering any fees in this case because he previously represented in this Court and in the Second Circuit Court of Appeals that he was acting on behalf of the Plaintiff-Class pro bono. He argued that due to his lack of any financial interest in the outcome, the settlement and allocation process satisfied Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23, due process requirements, and applicable ethical considerations. This Court and the Second Circuit cited Mr. Neuborne's "pro bono" status in approving the settlement and the allocation. In now reversing course, Mr. Neuborne is barred by the doctrine of judicial estoppel from recovering fees from the settlement fund. Simon v Satellite Glass Corp., 128 F.3d 68, 71 (2d Cir. 1997)("Judicial estoppel prevents a party in a legal proceeding from taking a position contrary to a position the party has taken in an earlier proceeding."); AXA Marine and Aviation Ins. Ltd. v. Seajet Ind., 84 F.3d 622, 628 (2d Cir. 1996)(party who advanced an inconsistent factual position in a prior proceeding that "was adopted by the first court in some manner" is barred from changing positions.). Clearly, the elements of judicial estoppel are present because this Court has frequently cited Mr. Neuborne's "pro bono" status in its decisions and statements. See, e.g. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 105 F.Supp.2d 139, 146 (E.D.N.Y. 2000); In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 270 F.Supp.2d 313, 322 (E.D.N.Y. 2002); Transcript of January 5, 2001 Hearing, at 11. So did the Second Circuit Court of Appeals. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 2005 WL 2175955, *3 (2d Cir. Sept. 9, 2005).

In November 1999, several months after Mr. Neuborne now claims he had stopped working "pro bono," he defended the settlement structure, including the procedure for allocations, on the basis that he personally had "waived all attorneys fees." He argued that the class would be protected by the presence of class counsel who lacked any financial stake in the decisions due to their "pro bono" status. As he explained:

> 28. [T]he structure and mechanics of the settlement agreement assures absent class members the undivided loyalty of dedicated and competent counsel, and a Court-appointed Special Master devoted to achieving the fairest possible result for members of the plaintiff classes, while avoiding unseemly and psychologically destructive formal divisions between and among victims of the Holocaust at the close of their lives. [citation omitted]. The principal structural impediment to undivided loyalty in certain recent class actions has been the potential conflict between and among entrepreneurial counsel, who may have a financial interest in fees generated by an expeditious settlement; the defense bar intent on assuring a global settlement; and the interests of absent class members in continued litigation. Similarly, concerns have been expressed that the financial interests of entrepreneurial class counsel may cause counsel to favor certain class members at the expense of others in setting the terms of any settlement. Such a "divided loyalty" structural concern is completely absent from this case. Key members of the plaintiffs' Executive Committee who negotiated the settlement are providing their services on a pro bono basis, at most requesting that in lieu of attorneys fees payments be made to law schools to endow Holocaust Remembrance Chairs in > honor of class members who failed to survive, and to foster international human rights law designed to prevent future human tragedies. Numerous lawyers, including Lead Settlement Counsel, have waived all attorneys fees. . . . No possibility exists, therefore, of a significant financial conflict of interest between counsel and any class member.

Declaration of Burt Neuborne, November 5, 1999 (Docket No. 367)("Neuborne November 1999 Declaration"), at 17-18 (emphasis supplied).

Mr. Neuborne stated, in the present tense, that "key members" of the plaintiffs' Executive Committee "are providing their services on a pro bono basis," and that he specifically had "waived all attorneys fees." (Emphasis supplied). He did not differentiate between a time prior to February 1, 1999 and the future, nor could any construction of his words reasonably so conclude. This Court adopted Mr. Neuborne's position and cited Mr. Neuborne's pro-bono status frequently. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 270 F.Supp.2d 313, 322 (E.D.N.Y. 2002); In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 105 F.Supp.2d 139, 146 (E.D.N.Y. 2000).

It was equally clear that Mr. Neuborne touted his "pro bono" status as being central to the allocation phase of the case as well to the settlement itself:

> 33. Even more important than the practical impediments to using separate counsel to represent each subclass and generation, were the adverse social and psychological consequences of such a formal division of Holocaust victims into rival interest groups squabbling over a settlement fund that all agree is inadequate to provide full compensation to the victims. The members of the plaintiff classes are elderly victims of an unparalleled human catastrophe. At the close of > their lives, it would be socially and psychologically irresponsible to pit one group fo Holocaust victims against another in an unseemly battle for a larger share of a limited settlement fund that cannot do real justice to all. Instead, freed from any structural conflict of interest caused by financial self-interest, each plaintiffs' counsel pledged to assist the Special Master by making all relevant factual material, and by providing any necessary legal assistance in an effort to be fair to all class members. If the Court approves the settlement agreement, the process of allocation will then go forward in a scrupulously fair, but non-adversarial manner that respects the rights and dignity of class members.

> 34. While such an effort to temper the formal adversary process by imposing overlapping, non-adversary responsibilities on counsel may not be appropriate in other settings, under the unique circumstances of this litigation, the fourfold safeguards of (a) dedicated pro bono lawyers pledged to assist in the development of the fairest plan of allocation; (b) a Special Master appointed to assure the development of the fairest possible plan; (c) careful procedures encouraging participation by class members in shaping the final plan of allocation and distribution; and (d) a knowledgeable District Judge who participated fully in the negotiations, and who will ultimately pass on the fairness of any allocation plan, satisfies Rule 23, the commands of due process, and the ethical demands of this unique effort to invoke the class action mechanism on behalf of elderly Holocaust victims who lack the resources to assert legal claims of their own.

Neuborne November 1999 Declaration, at 20-21(emphasis supplied).

Mr. Neuborne has repeated or referenced this argument throughout the litigation, before this Court and the Second Circuit, in defense of the Special Master's recommended allocations and in defense of the Court's approval of the Special Master's recommendations.

petition that Mr. Neuborne had been expecting all along to be paid from the same settlement fund in which he formerly claimed no financial interest, and that he would expect such compensation to be approved by the same district court whose rulings he has claimed he is bound to defend if "within the Court's discretion." Although shocking to the Objectors, the current fee petition, and the expectation of compensation Mr. Neuborne has evidently harbored for his efforts in defense of the Special Master and the Court, suggest that the class members have been profoundly and cynically defrauded. So have the courts and the public.

The Objectors, and the class, had every right to rely on Mr. Neuborne's numerous record representations that he was representing 'the class" on a "pro bono" basis. After all, he has a duty of candor to the tribunal, the parties, and the judicial system. Mr. Neuborne now defends his fee request on the ground that he intended all along to seek fees after February 1, 1999, citing a footnote in an article he allegedly "circulated widely" (no dates given) which was published in a law review in late 2002. Supplemental Neuborne Declaration, at 4-5.[9] However, this obscure reference does not constitute a judicial statement, nor could it supersede all of his inconsistent prior and subsequent judicial statements which refer to his "pro bono" status in the litigation. *Board of License Comm'rs of Tiverton v. [9] The attorneys supporting Mr. Neuborne's fee request do not claim to have learned from the "widely circulated" article that Neuborne intended to seek fees in this case. Tellingly, their declarations state, using double negatives, that they had no reason to believe Mr. Neuborne would not seek fees for his "post settlement" work. See Declaration of Morris Ratner at 2; Declaration of Melvyn Weiss at 1-2. See also Declaration of Irwin B. Levin and Richard Shevitz, at 1-2, paragraph 3. Even if these gentlemen or other colleagues provided affirmative support of Mr. Neuborne's current claim, that would not overcome his previous contrary judicial assertions.

Mr. Neuborne's current argument, that "[t]he documents clearly distinguish Mr. Neuborne [sic] pre-settlement role from his post-settlement role as Lead Counsel," and other arguments advanced in his Supplemental Declaration of January 31, 2006, is simply not substantiated by the record.[10] It is inconsistent with all of his court filings in this case and the

These Orders were entered more than two months (in Gribetz's case) and eighteen months (in Volcker and Bradfield's case) after Mr. Neuborne now contends he changed hats, but no similar order was ever entered acknowledging the agreement Mr. Neuborne now claims he had with the Court.

Objectors' counsel has sought clarification regarding the alleged understanding between Mr. Neuborne and the Court from Mr. Neuborne's counsel, i.e. whether it was memorialized in writing, transcribed, etc. Letter from Samuel J. Second Circuit Court of Appeals. Considering Mr. Neuborne's numerous claims on the record of "pro bono" status, if he intended seek fees at some time in the case, he had a duty to say so forthrightly, on the record, contemporaneously in this litigation. He never did.[11] As numerous courts have held, a lawyer's omission of a critical fact violates the duty of candor no less than an affirmative misrepresentation. [11] As recently as September 26, 2005, in an open courtroom, in the presence of numerous Holocaust survivors who are class members in this case, Mr. Neuborne represented: "I served without fee in the Swiss case. I am the Lead Settlement Counsel in the Swiss case in which I served without fee for almost seven years." Transcript of Fairness Hearing in Rosner v. United States of America, Case No. 01-1859 in the U.S. District Court for the Southern District of Florida, at 28-29, attached as Exhibit 10 to Objectors' January 19, 2006, Notice of Filing. See also "Reservations Concerning Attorneys Fees," at 5, attached as Exhibit 9 to Objectors' January 19, 2006 Notice of Filing. His alleged service "without fee" in this case gave rise to his initial objection to the attorneys fees requested in Rosner.

Mr. Neuborne's Supplemental Declaration makes no effort to explain his failure to update court filings referring to his "pro bono status."

secondary distributions, Mr. Neuborne stated, "will be pursuant to scrupulously fair and transparent procedures, and will, I anticipate, be presided over by Judah Gribetz as a Special Master, and ultimately by Judge Korman." May 15, 2001 Letter from Burt Neuborne, Esquire to Samuel J. Dubbin, Esq. (Docket No. 989). Mr. Neuborne's failure to abide by his commitment to support greater funding for US Survivors was difficult enough for Objectors to accept on the obvious level that they believed Mr. Neuborne broke a promise on which they relied. Mr. Neuborne's subsequent explanation of his position, in which he defended the Special Master and the Court's decisions rather than advocate for his "clients," centered around his alleged responsibility as Lead Plaintiffs Settlement Counsel acting pursuant to a "unique" and "historic" settlement and allocation construct elaborately and repeatedly described throughout these proceedings, including the appeals, premised in large measure on his "pro bono" status, and the absence of economically conflicted lawyers acting "on behalf of the class."

The results and current fee request leave little doubt that Mr. Neuborne abandoned a substantial part of his "clientele" for the money he previously said would not influence his actions. To highlight this point, Mr. Neuborne's time records reflect hundreds of hours in consultation with the Special Master and the Court, during times when the allocation issues affecting Objectors were being decided – and not in public hearings. In many cases the time records explicitly reflect discussions between Mr. Neuborne and the Special Master, or with the Court, addressing open issues of vital concern to Objectors and other class members. Those issues were addressed in proper court filings and were supposed to be handled under "scrupulously fair" and transparent procedures.[12] Unfortunately, these protections were denied Objectors and thousands of their fellows in the Looted Assets Class, in violation of Rule 23, due process, and Mr. Neuborne's ethical obligations to the class and to the judicial system.

C. Responses to Specific Time Entries and Categories of Work

If Mr. Neuborne is not barred or estopped from recovering fees, Objectors herein address certain concerns raised by the records produced to date.[13] These concerns include questions about the number of hours claimed, the services performed, the value of the benefits conferred, or the contemporaneousness of time entries.[14]

[12] See, e.g. time entries for the following dates: June 21, 26; August 20; November 19; December 9, 1999; May 19; July 7, 12; August 9, 10, 2000; June 1, 29, 2001; June 6, 8, 11, 13, 26; July 9, 21; August 2, 3, 4, 17, 22, 25; September 14, 16, 17, 26; October 1, 2, 4, 9, 10, 2002; February 22, 23, 25; March 1, 2, 10, 24; April 25; May 23; July 24; September 14, 15, 23, 25; October 22; November 14, 24; December 4, 19, 2003, March 11, 2004.

[13] Mr. Neuborne's claim to compensation on the ground that this matter made it "impossible to continue [his] private consulting practice and limited [his] scholarly and pro bono activities" is untenable. Why should Holocaust survivors in the class pay to compensate Mr. Neuborne for his "lost" academic or pro bono opportunities?

[14] As noted in the Objections filed on behalf of the Class, Mr. Neuborne's time records depict an extraordinary amount of time during certain periods, especially for a law professor with full time teaching responsibilities who also serves as legal director of the Brennan Center at New York University Law School, and who was handling other demanding engagements such as the German slave labor/German Foundation litigation and the McCain-Feingold Campaign Finance Law litigation. To address these questions, Objectors requested information from Mr. Neuborne pertaining to the time he devoted to his other consulting engagements and academic duties during the time period for which he seeks fees here. See note 2, supra.

Objectors are seeking more information than Mr. Neuborne is willing to provide voluntarily, i.e. his declaration in support of his fee request to the German Foundation arbitrators, and time entries in the German case for periods that overlap with the time for which fees are sought in this case. See Letter from Samuel J. Dubbin to Samuel Issacharoff, February 17, 2006. Exhibit 3.

1. Questionable Entries.

a. Mr. Neuborne seeks compensation for time on September 22, 2003: "Kingsboro – 2 hrs – describe settlement to community." The problem with this entry is that undersigned counsel (and some of the Objectors) attended the Kingsboro Community College Forum on Holocaust restitution and litigation on that date. Mr. Neuborne, although confirmed as an attendee and expected by participants, rather famously failed to appear. The organizer of the forum announced after the lunch break that Mr. Neuborne had called at the last minute to say that he would not in fact appear. Declaration of Samuel J. Dubbin, February 17, 2006, Exhibit 4.

b. Between December 3, 2004 and February 22, 2005, Mr. Neuborne claims 26.5 hours for a "Bazyler piece." This presumably means he was reviewing an article Professor Michael Bazyler was writing, or he was drafting an article for a publication of Mr. Bazyler's. There is no conceivable justification for the class to pay for time Mr. Neuborne chose to devote to assist an academic colleague or to enhance his own publication resume.

c. After logging 11 hours on December 26, 1999 on "Weiss, Dunaevsky, Wolinsky, objections" for "review and analysis of pending objections likely to be pursued," and 12 hours on December 27, 1999 for "review settlement structure in light of likely objections," Mr. Neuborne claims to have devoted two hours on December 30, 1999 to "Dubin let. – review letter, analyze likely objection." The letter from Mr. Dubbin consisted of three sentences, and simply informed the Court that he would shortly be filing written objections to augment his comments at the November 29, 1999 Fairness hearing.

d. On December 22, 2000, soon after the filing by US Survivors of a simple Notice of Appeal of the Court's November 22, 2000 allocation decision, Mr Neuborne claims 2 hours for "Dubbin appeal – review appeal on allocation." But no issues had been presented at that time; The US Survivors did not file their Forms C and D listing the issues raised in the appeal until several days later – January 4, 2001. On the same date (December 22, 2000), Mr. Neuborne claims two hours each to review the "Schonbrun appeal" and the "Romani appeal."

e. On February 28, 2001, Mr. Neuborne claims 11 hours to "research re HSF allocation appeal/cy pres history/late night." This entry was made the same day he logged 9 hours to "research issues raised by Katz appeal/IOM process." Aside from the fact that 20 hours of work in one day is unusual, the problem with this time entry is that the U.S. Survivors' appeal was filed on December 22, 2000 in the names of several individuals and the Holocaust Survivor groups that they represented. The Notice of Appeal makes no mention of the organization "HSF." Nor was there any court filing or communication using the name "HSF" until long after the date of this entry.

f. On August 23, 2002, Mr. Neuborne claims 3.5 hours for "conv Dubbin re allocation/discussion of his objections" and 6.5 hours "review Dubbin's objections/discuss with other counsel/Mel." That is a total of 10.0 hours on August 23, the day the undersigned sent a four (4) paragraph letter to the Court objecting to the Special Master's recommendation for the first supplemental distribution of interest on the settlement fund for the looted assets class. Although counsel called Mr. Neuborne upon his unexpected receipt of the Special Master's recommendation, the conversation certainly did not last 3.5 hours. Nor is it understandable how Mr. Neuborne spent 6.5 hours reviewing and discussing a letter which barely exceeded one page in length. (Docket No. 1341).

2. Speeches and lectures. Mr. Neuborne seeks compensation for numerous speeches to organizations or groups such as the "AJC," "ADL," "community leaders," or various judicial or academic audiences (e.g. NYU, Columbia, UVa., Millersville). Under standards previously urged by Mr. Neuborne, these hours are not compensable from the class. In 2003, he said: "it is unclear whether the members of the Swiss bank classes are an appropriate source of involuntary compensation for [counsel's] public activities on behalf of his clients' vision of the most appropriate way to seek restitution for Holocaust victims. I have expressed similar concerns to the Court in response to earlier fee applications premised on contact with the media and discussion of Holocaust-related issues with the interested community. I continue to believe that such activities are important and praiseworthy, but I question whether they qualify for an award of fees from the plaintiff class, especially a hourly rates of $425 per hour that are designed to provide compensation for legal expertise, not public relations." See Supplemental Declaration of Burt Neuborne in Response to the Amended Application of Samuel Dubbin, Esq. For Counsel Fees, July 21, 2003. ("Neuborne July 2003 Declaration").[15] Yet today, Mr. Neuborne is now seeking tens of thousands of dollars, at $700 per hour, from the class for similar "non-legal" work.

3. Evaluation of other attorneys' fee requests. Mr. Neuborne seeks compensation for time spent reviewing other attorneys' fee requests. However, all indications were that Mr. Neuborne's services in this regard were "pro bono" as well. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., [15] Mr. Neuborne made that assertion even though no request for such compensation was actually at issue in July 2003; only Counsel's request for compensation for insurance-related work was pending because the request for compensation for allocations-related work had been deferred by agreement. See Neuborne July 2003 Declaration, at 2.

270 F. Supp.2d 313, 314 (E.D.N.Y. 2002)("This case is different from other cases because some of the leading members of the class action bar agreed to prosecute the case without fee, thus altering the considerations that typically underlie the determination of an appropriate fee. Moreover, one of them, Professor Burt Neuborne, has undertaken to carefully review the fee applications of those attorneys who provided services and seek fees."). Hence, it is improper for Mr. Neuborne now to seek compensation for this time.

4. Negotiations concerning deposited assets disclosure and claims processes. Mr. Neuborne seeks compensation for hundreds of hours devoted to negotiations and court filings addressing various contours of the Deposited Assets Claims resolution (CRT) process which has yielded little in incremental dollars or information disclosure to class members. He has made no effort to quantify the monetary benefits resulting from this work. According to the standards previously urged by Mr. Neuborne in evaluating other fee requests, services rendered are not compensable from class settlement funds unless they produce a material benefit for the class. Neuborne July 2003 Declaration, at 7-8. The Court adopted this standard. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 311 F.Supp.2d 363, 376, 381, 382 (E.D.N.Y. 2004)("Not all work is entitled to be compensated, even when that work is done in the context of a lawsuit.").[16]

[16] Mr. Neuborne stated previously: "I do not contest the fact that [counsel] has expended substantial time on Holocaust-related issues, including the scope of the insurance releases in this case. I do not believe, however, that the plaintiff-class can be turned into in involuntary client with an obligation to pay [counsel] more than the economic value of [counsel's] services merely because [counsel] has expended time." Letter from Burt Neuborne, Esquire, to Hon. Edward R. Korman, September 9, 2003.

Objectors would ordinarily support reasonable compensation for lawyers' work that opened the door for potential recovery and enhanced the historical record and the transparency of restitution efforts, even if monetary benefits did not immediately result. See, e.g., Koppel v. Wien, 743 F.2d 129 (2d Cir. 1984). However, Mr. Neuborne is judicially estopped from having a different standard apply to his fee request than the one

DUBBIN & KRAVETZ, LLP

Unfortunately, the settlement itself contained severe limitations in the ability of class members to obtain information about deposited assets from Defendants, and on the Court's ability to sanction Defendants for denying the CRT access to adequate information to maximize recoveries by class members. The fact is that despite these many hours of negotiations and the filings, most applicants remain stymied by an opaque and frustrating process for recovering deposited assets. These frustrations and shortcomings have been described in several court orders, the Special Master's April 16, 2004 Interim Report, and filings by Mr. Neuborne. E.g. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 319 F.Supp.2d 301 (E.D.N.Y. June 1, 2004); Letter from Chief Judge Edward R. Korman to Diana L. Taylor, New York State Superintendent of Banks, August 1, 2005 (Docket No. 2785); Letter from Burt Neuborne, Esquire, to the Honorable Edward R. Korman, April 19, 2005 (Docket No. 2870). However long the hours worked by Mr. Neuborne or well-intentioned the goals of this endeavor, by his standards and the one adopted by the Court, monetary benefits from the added work are slight or nonexistent and the time is therefore not compensable from the class's funds.

5. Negotiations regarding insurance releases and claims program. Mr. Neuborne seeks compensation for time expended renegotiating the insurance releases that were initially agreed to by Plaintiffs and preliminarily approved by the Court, and fashioning a "modest insurance claims program." Neuborne Fee Petition at 5. Again, based on the standards he urged and the Court has applied, this request should be denied.

Mr. Neuborne's current petition states that the value of the insurance claims program negotiated after the modification of the settlement is approximately $1 million. To date, he urged for others and which this Court adopted.

available information shows approximately $300,000 in successful insurance payments from the process negotiated by Mr. Neuborne.[17] Objectors contend that the potential recovery from Swiss insurers and reinsurers was far greater and his negotiations represent a major failure.[18] By the standards previously applied in this case, he does not qualify for compensation for work done in connection with such a result.

At the time Mr. Neuborne was negotiating with the Swiss insurers and reinsurers, he had the benefit of filings which provided considerable insight into the culpability of and possible avenues of recovery from Swiss insurers and reinsurers. His time records reflect several hours reviewing those filings.[19] Yet, in negotiating a claims process for Swiss insurers and reinsurers, [17] There is little available information about the full results of Mr. Neuborne's negotiations with the Swiss or the current status of the insurance program.

[18] Sidney Zabludoff, the insurance economist whose credentials in the field of Holocaust era insurance this Court recently praised, see Letter from Chief Judge Edward R. Korman to Diana L. Taylor, New York State Superintendent of Banks, August 1, 2005 (Docket No. 2785), estimated the value of unpaid assets from Jewish Holocaust victims in the hands of Swiss insurers and reinsurers not excluded from the original settlement to be in excess of $2 billion (including $427 million in direct insurance and $1.7 billion in reinsurance). See Declaration of Sidney J. Zabludoff, Exhibit to Modified Fee Request of Dubbin & Kravetz, LLP, March 30, 2004, cited at 311 F.Supp.2d at 377.

This Court observed in its March 31, 2004 Order that Mr. Zabludoff's estimate was not practical because it was "impossible" to sue the companies for which the releases were modified. The existence of litigation against some of these insurers in the U.S. calls that assumption into question. E.g. Ward-Thg., Inc., v. Swiss Reinsurance Co., 1997 WL 83204 (S.D.N.Y. Feb. 27, 1997).

The point for this discussion, however, is that Mr. Neuborne's renegotiation of the insurance releases was not carried out in a way that would be expected to yield the best outcome for the class.

[19] Counsel's suggestions for a more effective mechanism to harvest insurance assets (September 1, 2000 letter) were not adopted. Counsel urged the publication of names of policy holders by any insurer or reinsurer who sought a release from the settlement, the establishment of an electronic database of class members to facilitate the matching of names and policies, and more. See September 1, 2000 letter. Cf. In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litig., 319 F. Supp.2d 301, 327 (E.D.N.Y. 2004)(claims process

Mr. Neuborne did not employ any insurance or reinsurance experts, or even any translators in the effort. Nor did he obtain any expert assessment of the aggregate value of possible Swiss insurance claims at any time, relying instead on defendants' representations. Class members have requested, and deserve, a more robust and transparent effort through which to pursue insurance assets from Swiss companies.

6. Any Fees Should Be Limited to Work Expended which Actually Generated A Financial Benefit. If Mr. Neuborne were not estopped from seeking fees for reasons explained above, then under the standards he urged for other lawyers he is would be entitled to compensation only for the work that actually yielded the claimed dollar enhancements. His alleged major financial enhancements are $5 million for litigation before Judge Block regarding compound interest, $22.5 million (plus $2.5 million) in additional interest from the "accelerated payment of $334 million to the settlement fund," and $25 million in tax savings from legislation passed as a result of his efforts with co-Plaintiffs' counsel Melvyn Weiss. See Supplemental Neuborne Declaration, January 31, 2006, at 11-12. His time records show that Mr. Neuborne devoted no more than 100 hours (and probably less) to the "accelerated payment" negotiations and the tax legislation. His time on the compound interest dispute is more difficult to discern, but appears relatively modest based on his narrative description of the tasks. In any event, Mr. Neuborne should receive, if anything, compensation for the time expended for the specific work is more successful where the survivors and heirs can respond to published bank account holder names rather than file blind claims in hope of a match.). Rejection of these proposals was unfortunate, especially considering that reinsurers concededly retained data about underlying policies they reinsured. See November 20, 2000 Letter from Burt Neuborne to the Honorable Edward R. Korman, Docket No. 813.

generating a monetary benefit -- an amount that is orders of magnitude lower than the sum he now claims.

Conclusion

Mr. Neuborne was instrumental in engineering the "unique and historic" settlement and allocation structure premised in large part on the leadership of "pro bono" attorneys without any financial interest in decisions, and justified the settlement and allocation mechanisms to the Court of Appeals on that basis. Based on these numerous representations, in this and other courts, over a period of nearly 8 years, Mr. Neuborne should not be allowed to change his status after the fact. Even if he is deemed not to be disqualified based on his prior representations, his fee request is excessive. At best, he should receive compensation at a fraction of his $700 per hour request for the few hundred hours he worked that generated the $58 million in benefits he claims to have created. Remarkably, he instead seeks more money for himself from the class – $4,088,500 – than the U.S. Survivors in the Looted Assets class have received to date from those very allocations – $3,000,850. His request in the face of the desperate needs of thousands of indigent survivors in the United States who cannot afford their rent, food, medicines, or even someone to come to their home to give them a bath or prepare meals, and who have been turned away repeatedly by Mr. Neuborne and the Court for their due recovery under this class action settlement – requires the U.S. Survivors to urge this Court to reject Mr. Neuborne's fee petition.

Re In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litigation
Civ. 96-4849 (ERK)

Dear Mr. Issacharaoff:

In connection with Burt Neuborne's Fee Petition, I am writing for clarification regarding Mr. Neuborne's and the Court's alleged understanding about his compensation for services as Lead Plaintiffs Settlement Counsel.

His initial Declaration begins with the statement that "the Court has determined that Lead Settlement Counsel should be compensated at the conclusion of his service on a lodestar basis on the same terms and conditions as a Special Master." His Supplemental Declaration states "Chief Judge Korman's initial request that I serve as Lead Settlement Counsel was accompanied by an assurance that I would be eligible for hourly lodestar compensation on the same terms and conditions as a Special Master. I explicitly accepted the Court's financial terms."

Are there any details you can supply regarding the exchange? On what date did it occur? Was it memorialized in writing? Was it transcribed? Were any other witnesses present at the time?

I look forward to your response.

Sincerely,

Samuel J. Dubbin, P.A.

Please accept this e-mail as a response to factual questions raised during our conferenc call and in Sam Dubbin's letter of February 9, 2006.

1) The total number of hours worked by Burt Neuborne on the German cases in 2000 is 627

2) There are no documents, transcripts or writings on conversations referenced in the Dubbin letter of 2/9/06. We do not have any record of when such conversation(s) occurre only that these comments arose during the innumerable interactions between Mr. Neuborne and the Court.

I believe this satisfies all the requests for information outstanding.

Re In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litigation
Civ. 96-4849 (ERK)

Dear Mr. Issacharaoff:

Thank you for sending me Mr. Neuborne's original filing. I received your January 20, 2006 letter to Judge Korman this past Monday, and wanted to note the following.

First, notwithstanding your citation to Hensley, FRCP 23(h)(1)) requires any claim for attorneys fees to be "directed to class members in a reasonable manner." The Advisory Committee Notes to the 2003 amendments state, regarding Rule 23(h)(1): "Because members of the class have an interest in the arrangements for payment of class counsel whether that payment comes from the class fund or is made directly by another party, notice is required in all instances." To date, this rule has not been satisfied.

Further, considering the notice requirement in subsection (1) and the right of class members to object in subsection (2), a February 3, 2006 cutoff for opposing filings is premature. See Committee Notes to Rule 23(h)(2).

Finally, for the reasons stated in Bob Swift's Declaration of December 29, 2005, we are asking for you to supply Mr. Neuborne's time records from other engagements for the time period that overlaps with his request in this case, such as the German Slave Labor/German Foundation litigation, the McCain-Feingold Campaign Finance law litigation, and other consulting and academic commitments. See Committee Notes to Rule 23(h)(2).

Mr. Swift and I would like to arrange a conference call with you at your earliest convenience to discuss these matters.

Sincerely,

Samuel J. Dubbin, P.A.

Re In re Holocaust Victim Assets Litigation
Civ. 96-4849 (ERK)

Dear Mr. Issacharaoff:

Although I understand your position to be that Mr. Neuborne need only supply his total number of hours for the year 2000, we are requesting any declarations he filed with the German Foundation fee arbitrators, and his daily time records for 1999 and 2000 (and 2001 if any); i.e. time periods overlapping with this fee request.

We believe these are discoverable. See Supplemental Objections, February 17, 2006 and Advisory Committee Notes to 2003 Amendments to FRCP 23(h).

Sincerely,

Samuel J. Dubbin, P.A.

DECLARATION OF SAMUEL J. DUBBIN

1. My name is Samuel J. Dubbin, and I am over eighteen years of age. This Declaration is based on my personal knowledge and is made under penalty of perjury under the laws of the United States.

2. On September 22, 2003, I attended a Conference held at Queensboro Community College in the New York City area which dealt with Holocaust restitution and litigation. I was invited and attended as a participant on one of the panels due to my work representing individual survivors and heirs, as well as survivor groups such as the Holocaust Survivors Foundation USA, Inc., in restitution related litigation and advocacy. The audience consisted primarily of survivors, children of survivors, and students. I attended the entire conference that day. The audience included may who were critical of many aspects of the restitution process and who expressed their criticisms at the conference.

3. The keynote Speaker was Alan Hevesi, the former New York City official who had been instrumental in the original efforts to remove City business from Swiss banks due to questions about their handling of Jews' money during and after World War II. Other participants in the forum included Gideon Taylor, Executive Vice President of the Conference on Jewish Material Claims Against Germany, Inc. ("Claims Conference"); Professor Michael Bazyler, of Whittier Law School; Monica Dugas, an attorney who worked for the New York State Banking Office assisting Holocaust victims and heirs with looted art claims; Eva Fogelman, a child of survivors who is also a psychologist well-known in the Holocaust survivor community for her work with survivors and second generation patients, and Martin Stern, an individual who resides in Israel and Great Britain, whose family initiated some of the earlier litigation against Assicurazioni Generali, S.p.A, and recovered a settlement in the process. There were other participants who I cannot recall.

4. Burt Neuborne, Esquire, was scheduled to appear at the forum. However, after lunch the forum organizer announced to the participants that Mr. Neuborne called and said he would not in fact be attending. Indeed, Mr. Neuborne did not speak at the Queensboro forum that day.
